

Book - The Blessed Herb

The Blessed Herb, medical cannabis, users in their own words. In this book, patients suffering from a wide range of illnesses share their experiences of using cannabis as a medicine. Recipes and guidelines on the medical use of cannabis are also included.

Cannabis is the oldest recognised medicinal plant known to mankind. Cannabis Sativa, its official Latin title, was first mentioned in the Chinese dynasty in the year 6500 BC. In Europe, Dioscorides, Emperor Nero's military doctor, was the first to mention it in the 1st century AD in his work Materia medica. Pliny, his contemporary, mentioned it in his thirty-seven-volume encyclopedia, Naturalis Historia. Solinus referred to it in his work Medicina Plinii in the 4th century AD. Nearly all medieval academic studies make frequent reference to the works of Pliny. In every herb book published before 1930, you can find recipes for tinctures, compresses, teas, ointments etc. After that time, cannabis came under the Opium Act and knowledge of this herb evaporated.
