

Book - Hashish. The joy of making and curing

This book intends to teach readers and help them discover produce rich hashish, from resins with good genetics, specifically in temperate world climates. It is a journey that shows growers the typical mistakes that could keep them from producing excellent results, even with the right genetics behind it.

"Hashish. The joy of making and cutting" shows that in order to produce high quality hashish, the cure process should be achieved slowly, over a period of at least 3 months and with a warm temperature. During this time, the hashish should be enclosed in an air-tight container and be opened every three days to avoid mustiness. You will find this one and many other advices in this valuable edition.
